NAZI HIGH COMMAND ANNOUNCES PANZER FORCES' VICTORY

Communique States That The 'Reds' Have Lost More Than 200,000 Killed, Wounded

25 DIVISIONS GONE

Claim To Have Taken 100,000 Russians As Prisoners

BERLIN, Aug. 9.—(INS)—Another spectacular victory for German Panzer forces on the Ukrainian front was announced by the High Command today in a communique which said the Russians had lost more than 200,000 men killed and wounded.

Proclaiming destruction of 25 Soviet divisions, the High Command stated the sixth and twelfth and part of the eighteenth Red field armies had been knocked out of action.

The communique also listed 100,000 prisoners captured along with 317 tanks, 858 field guns, 5,250 motor trucks and great quantities of other war booty.

The war bulletin said the new triumph for the Nazi Panzer units represented the strategic consequences of the heavy fighting which Chancellor Hitler's field headquarters had promised to the German nation a few days ago.

It was claimed that in this vast and bloody defeat the Red forces had suffered their heaviest casualties so far. German authorities said the battle presaged complete collapse of Russian military power.

The latest supplementary communique followed earlier official assertions of a shattering German victory in the north and authorities stated the Soviet defenses were giving way at both ends. It was contended that both Leningrad on the north and Odessa to the south are virtually under siege.

In the Ukraine, the High Command said, the heaviest fighting occurred around Uman, midway between Kiev and Odessa, where the three Russian field armies were trapped and destroyed. The ruined 25 Russian divisions were described as including infantry.

May Create New Park Of Great Natural Beauty

WILKES-BARRE, Pa., Aug. 9.—(INS)—Creation of a new State Park, of ravishing natural beauty, today moved nearer fulfillment following an inspection tour of beautiful Ricketts Glen by Gov. Arthur H. James and a party of State officials and newspapermen.

The proposed new park consists of 11,600 acres of virgin forest, lakes, streams and waterfalls located in Luzerne, Wyoming and Sullivan counties. The Legislature, before adjourning, passed a $150,000 appropriation for the purchase of the property from William Ricketts, son of Col. Robert B. Ricketts, the estate's original owner.

Governor James and Secretary of Forests and Waters G. Albert Stewart led the party over mountain trails that brought from them expressions of surprise at the natural beauty of the place.

"We certainly want to acquire this property if we can," the Governor enthusiastically exclaimed. "It's one of the most beautiful areas I have ever seen."

Following a luncheon at Wilkes-Barre attended by Pennsylvania Supreme Court Justice George W. Maxey the official party motored the 25 miles to the scene and started down the two and one-half mile mountain trail.

Scenes of picturesque, rugged beauty filled the eye during the two-hour hike. The trail follows winding Kitchens Creek and at various points in the descent members of the party were wet with spray from the more than 25 waterfalls which dot the crystal clear stream.

The party also inspected the innumerable lakes which punctuate the landscape atop North Mountain.

The highway committee reported Park avenue from Main to 9th is completed and will be open for traffic today.

Gov. James To Ask For "Gas" Consumption Cut

HARRISBURG, Aug. 9.—(INS)—Gov. Arthur H. James will open a campaign next week for a one-third voluntary reduction of gasoline consumption by motorists and will appoint a liaison officer to head the campaign. It was disclosed today by Dr. Arnold C. Marts, executive director of the State Defense Council, following a conference with Federal officials.

This plan of operation was agreed upon by the Governor after Marts conferred at Washington with National Petroleum Co-ordinator Harold L. Ickes and Director of Civilian Defense Fiorello H. LaGuardia.

The Governor will issue an appeal to motorists next week through the medium of newspaper advertisements paid for by the Federal Government to conserve gasoline. The liaison officer, who will take charge of the campaign, will spend several days next week in Washington studying plans for the conservation of gasoline.

Marts said he had informed LaGuardia that considerable confusion had resulted because orders issued by the Civilian Defense Council were being sent to local defense councils, instead of to the Governor's office, as had been previously agreed upon.

LaGuardia, he added, was "chagrined" to learn that there had been a "misunderstanding" between State and National defense officials and the New York Mayor "immediately called Governor James on the telephone and arranged for P. S. Walmsley to come to Harrisburg and work out details of cooperation." Marts said LaGuardia's aide is expected to arrive Monday.

C. I. O. Wants Government To Take Over Shipyard

KEARNY, N. J., Aug. 9.—(INS)—The U. S. Government today had before it a request of 17,000 CIO shipbuilding strikers who walked out of their jobs at the Federal Shipbuilding and Drydock Co., Thursday to take over the yards and "operate them in the interests of national defense."

The request was contained in a statement issued by Peter Flynn, vice-president of Local 16, Industrial Union of Marine and Shipbuilding Workers of America, which said:

"Local 16 calls on the United States Government to take over the Federal shipbuilding yards and operate them in the interests of national defense."

"The company's bad taste in dealing with our union in defiance of the ruling of the National Defense Mediation Board granting local 16 modified union shop, its willingness to keep the yard closed indefinitely rather than to agree to a fair adjustment—all these failures of management to fulfill its responsibilities make it imperative for the Government to act at once."

"The 17,000 strikers are just as anxious to go back to work and resume building ships as the rest of the American people are to get those ships built. But they cannot do so while a stubborn company management demands the power to carry on a ceaseless battle against the union and its membership."

Germans Claim Annihilation of Soviet Forces at Smolensk

Berlin, Aug. 9.—Annihilation of encircled Soviet forces 60 miles southeast of the fallen Russian city of Smolensk was announced today by the German High Command.

A special communique, issued direct from Hitler's headquarters, said more than 38,000 prisoners were taken along with 359 guns and other war material. To the south, on the Ukrainian front, German Panzer forces were credited with another spectacular victory. A high command communique, proclaiming destruction of 25 Soviet divisions, said the Russians had lost more than 200,000 men killed and wounded in the new operations. The statement claimed that the sixth and 12th and part of the 18th Red field armies had been knocked out of action.

Meanwhile, authorized German military quarters hailed what they called "the end of the first week of decisive operations on the eastern front."

The week, they said, was marked by brilliant successes in the southern sector "while operations in other sectors also are progressing most satisfactorily." The present tide of battle, they said, is comparable to the Artois conflict in the battle of Flanders which ended in the Dunkirk disaster.

Refusing to deny or confirm that Russian planes had reached Berlin during the night, these authorized quarters said: "We are not interested in London or Moscow reports."

Meanwhile, the official communique told of great numbers of prisoners and war material captured in new Ukrainian front actions. At least 103,000 prisoners, the statement said, were captured along with 317 tanks, 858 field guns, 5,280 motor trucks and other arms and munitions.

BUCKS PIGEON FANCIER IS IN SIGNAL CORPS

Clarence Stull, a Member of North Penn Homing Club, Helps Develop Carriers

IS NOW IN LOUISIANA

SELLERSVILLE, Aug. 9.—A Sellersville pigeon fancier is at present working with the 280th Signal Pigeon Company, at Camp Claiborne, La., the only company of its kind in the United States Army. The former resident engaged in his chosen work with the army, is Clarence Stull, a member of North Penn Homing Club, with headquarters here, is helping with the development of carrier pigeons at Camp Claiborne with 133 other enlisted men and nine officers.

He first served at Ft. Monmouth, N. J., site of the army signal school, and since has been transferred to the experimental station in Louisiana. A two-way pigeon system was instituted between Camp Beauregard and Camp Claiborne, a distance of about 23 miles. There tests on the speed and accuracy with which homing pigeons can be made to carry messages fastened to their legs are being made.

Capt. John B. Boltz is in charge of the only pigeon company in the United States Army. Equipment includes 48 lofts. About half of them are the type that can be moved from place to place in trucks. The others are portable, too, and can be arranged in a short time at the necessary location.

The birds fly at the rate of 40 to 55 miles per hour on long flights, going at such great heights sometimes that they would be out of danger of being shot.

The value of homing pigeons was illustrated a few weeks ago when a Perkassie man took one out to sea on a fishing trip. When the fishermen were heading for shore a fog settled suddenly. The result was they were stranded, having lost their bearings. The Perkassie man released his pigeon and within a short time two Coast Guard cutters came to the rescue.

Mr. Stull often won prizes with his birds in the North Penn section. His entries took part in all the races each year.

Here and There in Bucks County Towns

With about 20 firemen in attendance at one of the smallest meetings in years, two warnings, one for the firemen themselves concerning a watchful eye on the equipment, and the other dealing with a caution about being correct in telephoning fire alarms, were sounded at a session of the Doylestown Fire Company.

In the absence of Chief Jay F. Richar, Assistant Chief Nick Petrillo, climaxed the confusion in locations about the Monday evening fire when the firemen chased out almost to Mechanicsville only to learn the fire was at Pebble Hill, pointed out the necessity of giving correct details about the location of a fire over the telephone.

So confusing were the details about the scene of the burning tractor that

RICHBORO FIREMEN GET TANK WAGON

New Apparatus is Equipped With Pump and 625-Gallon Tank

IS A NEW 1941 MODEL

RICHBORO, Aug. 9.—A tank wagon has been delivered to the Richboro Fire Company. The chassis is a 1941 model International truck with a front approach pump, 625 gallon tank, several hundred feet of hose and other necessary items. The wagon was accepted at a meeting of the company.

This meeting was also the last one prior to the carnival which is to be held Friday and Saturday evenings, August 29 and 30, and September 5 and 6. Harry T. Walker, committee chairman, reported that erection of the stands has begun and other arrangements are in order. It is hoped that enough money may be realized on the carnival to make final payment on the tank wagon.

Chief John O. Fleer reported that the company attended a fire July 30 when the barn on the farm of Leigh Cornell, near Feasterville, was struck by lightning. Chief Fleer took this opportunity to make a plea to the public.

NEW HEALTH LAWS TO BECOME EFFECTIVE HERE

Homes Not To Be Posted For Measles, Whooping Cough, Mumps or Chicken-Pox

STATE CHANGES RULES

Residences here are not to be quarantined for measles, whooping cough, chicken pox, German measles or mumps, hereafter, it was decided by the Bristol Borough Board of Health, Thursday night.

The action of the local Health Board was taken in conformity with a change which has been made in the health regulations of the State by the Advisory Health Board of Pennsylvania Department of Health.

"No child or other person ill with any of these diseases shall leave his own premises until the lapse of the number of days specified by the Advisory Health Board for each disease," reads the new regulations.

Physicians will, as heretofore, notify the local Health Officer, James H. Brooks, of the prevalence of these diseases. Notices will then be sent as usual to the school authorities and those afflicted with the disease will not be permitted to attend school, until they have recovered and the health officer has been notified.

Household contacts of cases of these five diseases, whether the contacts are immune or not, or any other members of the household except the patient are not to be restricted in any way.

Physicians and householders must report these diseases as in the past.

At the meeting of the Bristol Health Board, Thursday night, the health officer reported seven cases of mumps, two of measles, one of scarlet fever, and three cases of dog bite.

There were 37 health certificates issued, 24 of which were renewals.

Two cases of nuisances were reported.

The usual monthly inspection of dairies was made and conditions were found to be satisfactory. Sedimentation tests of milk were made and it was found that the milk now being served in Bristol is free of dirt and that a great improvement has been made during the past few years, previous to the monthly inspections.

AUXILIARY FUELS

Whether fuel derived from alcohol—in turn derived from some types of waste—can have an easing effect upon the shortage of oil-derived power fuels has not been fully determined. The California legislature, concerned in the matter, thinks it can. President Roosevelt, speaking for the Federal government, holds that insufficient data are available to warrant a conclusion. Shortages of fuel are geographical, due to transportation difficulties, but may become nationwide.

The California legislature has adopted a joint resolution urging that plants be erected for the "conversion of surplus fruits and vegetables into alcohol for use in the national defense as an auxiliary fuel." The California interest arises from its huge production of such crops.

In a letter to the speaker of the California legislature, President Roosevelt has said that "while it is true that a number of foreign countries process agricultural materials for the production of alcohol as motor fuel, it is equally true that the motor fuel economy of countries possessing no petroleum resources is very different from such economy in the United States. It has never been established in this country that the conversion of agricultural products into motor fuel is economically feasible or necessary for national defense."

Mr. Roosevelt added: "It has been recognized for some time that a real need exists in this country for the development of all the information possible on this very contentious subject. Hence a pilot-plant is being set up at the northern regional research laboratory of the Department of Agriculture at Peoria, Ill., to make such studies. Until this plant is completed and has been in operation on a variety of agricultural products for such time as may be required for the collection of essential data, it would not seem advisable to undertake the project advanced."

LATIN AMERICAN TRADE

If the Latin nations of South America are not satisfied with Uncle Sam's good neighbor policy, they ought to be. The United States is now absorbing completely the losses to South America incident to severance of its export outlets to Europe. United States imports from South America now exceed exports to that continent by $250,000,000 annually.

Always in the past this country has sold more to South America than it bought. But purchases during the first half of this year indicate that the United States in 1941 will take total Latin imports of more than a billion dollars, which is more than double the normal value of Latin America's trade with continental Europe.

A great deal of this nation's increased trade with the Latins is for defense needs. But considerable of it is induced by the fact that the administration at Washington is emphasizing the good neighbor policy and taking Latin products of which the United States is not in imminent need. Some products and raw materials are purchased to keep them out of the clutches of the Axis, including Japan.

Monday evening's program rendered in connection with the weekly meeting of Richland Grange was based on "Our Highways," using as a slogan "An Improved Road By Every Farm." After a reading by Mrs. Norman Clymer, a debate took place on the subject, Resolved: "That the State should own and maintain all our roads."

Erwin M. Landis spoke in favor of the affirmative side and Harry P. Landis upheld the negative side. After a very interesting debate, with real substantial arguments on both sides, the audience, serving as judges, voted in favor of the negative side by a unanimous decision.

Miss Ida Carbaugh favored the grange with a piano solo, after which Mrs. C. T. Lox discussed the topic, "How good roads increase the size of a community." She emphasized the fact that improved highways induce people to build out in the country, which greatly increases the population of rural districts.

PLENTY OF PEACHES ARE NOW IN PROSPECT FOR FRUIT LOVERS

By Miss Edna Stephany
(Home Economics Representative)
Crop reporters are predicting the biggest crop of peaches this year since the record breaker of 1931. By even the most conservative estimates, they say there'll be plenty of peaches for all use this summer.

Peaches come in white and yellow with cling and free stones. There is little difference in food value among peaches except in vitamin A value, but yellow-fleshed peaches outrank the white varieties on this score. According to home economists in the United States Department of Agriculture, a medium-sized dish of yellow peaches will supply about one-third the vitamin A an adult needs for a day. This vitamin, of course, is needed by both grown-ups and children for good nutrition.

Except for the very early ones, clingstone peaches usually are not eaten fresh. They are, however, especially suitable for cooking, for pickling, and for commercial canning. Peaches are one of the earliest fruits of all to can at home. Most home canners prefer midseason or late yellow-fleshed freestone peaches. Select peaches for canning with even more care than those you plan to eat fresh. Canning does not improve the quality of the fruit, and only the very best peaches are suitable.

To make sure of the quality, look for peaches that are firm and ripe but not soft. Avoid those that are badly bruised, those that are uneven in shape and have punctures made by worms, and those with brown spots of decay. The pink blush that is found on many varieties of peaches tells little about the quality, but the rest of the color on the outside of the peach is very important. If the background color is green, the peach may ripen with poor flavor or it may become shriveled. But the peach is safe, if this green color has changed to a yellow or whitish-yellow color.

The chief problem in canning peaches is to keep them from turning brown after they are peeled. That's why it is important to get the peaches into the containers and then into the water bath as quickly as possible. You can avoid peeling too many peaches if you know exactly how many jars or cans you are able to process at one time. Allow from 2 to 2½ pounds of peaches for each quart jar.

Precooking the peaches and packing them hot also helps to prevent the brown discoloration.

The water bath method of processing is more successful than the oven method. It takes longer to process peaches in the oven and they may turn brown before they are heated through. Another disadvantage of using the oven method is that the juice bubbles out, leaving the top peach "high and dry."

Further directions for canning fruits of all kinds may be found in Pennsylvania State College circular "Home Canning of Fruits and Vegetables," which may be obtained from the Agricultural Extension Office in Doylestown.

PUPPET LOVE by Cornelius Vanderbilt Jr.

CHAPTER TWENTY-NINE

"Do you mean," gasped Mrs. Bishop, "that the mother of your twins does not even know your true identity? Oh, Christopher!"

"Twins?" Nicky flashed back to her. "What twins?"

"Lemme handle this, Mrs. Bishop," Bedloe swaggered, though the patch on his nose reduced the effectiveness of the effort. "You two may as well come clean. I got the goods on ya. I ain't seen the twins, but I got it straight from Miss Chipper-ton in Maryland—see page 3, paragraph 1 of my report—that you had a pair."

"Oh, that," Chris laughed in angry relief. "That was only a joke, mother."

"Twins, A joke?" Mrs. Bishop's voice went off key. "I can't understand this dreadful change in you unless," with a glance at Nicky who had been slowly stepping along the side of Nemesis, "unless it is undue influence."

"How about this bed business?" Bedloe demanded. "I heard with my own ears all that talk about puttin' him to bed nights. Was that a joke?"

"It was all a joke," flared Nicky. "A big joke on me, apparently. We have no children, Mrs. Bishop. I'm nothing to your son, and never have been, and intend to maintain my present standing. Any influence I may have had over him, I'm taking with me. A circus man, he called himself!"

She was in the car, behind the wheel, turning the switch with an angry hand. Chris jumped on the running board.

"Nicky, darling," he pleaded, "you've got to listen to me. This is my mother, but I'm through, I tell you. I don't want the Bishop money. I want you!"

"I don't care what you want," she emphasized her remarks with a jab of the starter. "I have no part of it. It was a lark for you, that's all. No wonder you had to return to New York. You can go any place you wish. I'm going my way right now."

Furiously she swung the wheel, maneuvering the car into the drive with Nemesis bumping along behind.

"You can't do this, Nicky, you've got to listen to me."

"What is there to say, Mr. Bishop?" she kept her eyes fixed on the road. "You are what you are, whether or not you admitted it, and you gained my confidence . . ." her voice broke but that was drowned by the sputtering of the motor. "A 'forever' ring! What a Grade A fool I was!"

A small crowd of campers had gathered by this time and were enjoying the puzzling fracas with acute interest. Nicky had succeeded in swinging Nemesis around and was headed toward the road; Chris clinging to the running board.

"Let her go! Let her go!" Mrs. Bishop urged, her gloved hands clapped. Her set lips were blue with strain and her voice became increasingly breathless.

"But I can't! I won't!" Chris called back over his shoulder, as though the Bishop family customarily settled their affairs in public tourist camps. "We were to be married this evening."

"Were is right!" Nicky echoed fiercely.

"You go and I'll follow you," Chris shouted.

"Christopher!" Nancy screamed. "Your mother!"

Chris glanced over his shoulder to see Mrs. Bishop slump to the ground. With a short, emphatic word, he leaped off the running board and ran to his mother as Washington Bedloe reached her.

"You keep out of this!" Chris thundered at the detective.

"Who? Me?" Bedloe demanded belligerently. "A guy who'd threaten his own mother. . . ."

Chris lifted Mrs. Bishop in his arms and strode toward the lunch room. A backward glance showed Nemesis still standing at the gate, near his car and the Arab. What Nicky came back? She must know he couldn't be such a cad as he appeared now. They'd been too happy. He dropped his mother rather emphatically into a wicker chair that protested in every strand.

"How did you two get here?" Chris demanded angrily of Nancy, who brought the proprietor with ice-water, tea and smelling salts; and then stood by her long hands waving ineffectually while Chris and the owner worked over Mrs. Bishop.

"We flew down this morning, to Tampa. Bedloe hired this car and drove us here. He'd had reports along the way that you were headed in this direction." She hesitated, then in a burst of misery: "I telephoned her after that Wendworth business. Oh, Christopher, you're not yourself. You need someone to look after you."

"I'll pick my own keepers, if I do," Chris grumbled, rubbing his mother's frail, blue veined wrist. "We weren't engaged. You know that. It was only the family's idea. I'm going to marry Nicola Rogers. I mean that!"

Nancy made a small moaning noise while Mrs. Bishop stirred and her eyelids fluttered. Instantly Chris was on his feet, glancing out the door in time to see the tail lights of Nemesis disappear down the road.

"As soon as Mother comes out of this, I'm going."

"What in?" Washington Bedloe queried, his hat on the back of his head, an unbecoming smile on his broad jaw.

"My car, of course," Chris retorted irritably.

"Oh, yeh? Not tonight. Your little lady friend fixed that by putting a couple of holes in the gas tank with a long, fancy-lookin' knife."

Chris winced as though the point of the machete had touched him, the knife he had bought in Savannah for her protection. "Very well," grimly, "then I'll take that hearse you came in."

"What hearse?" Mrs. Bishop asked faintly, taking the water Nancy quickly proffered.

Bedloe told her with relish. She drew a deep breath, sat erect and dabbed at her nose with a bit of lace-edged linen.

"No, you won't, Christopher. I forbid it. The girl has more sense than you. I haven't gotten to the bottom of this yet, but apparently it is not as serious as it first appeared. Now she's gone, let her go, and we can settle with her later."

"Nicky can't be bought off, if that's what you mean, Mother, and furthermore, I'm not going to let her go."

"You've changed so," Mrs. Bishop mourned. "What will your father say?"

"There's nothing he can say that will make any difference," Chris continued more gently. "I've found myself. I don't like finance, nor society. I want to work, I mean really work in a factory or something of that sort. For the present, I love Nicky, and I'm going to marry her. All we both want is the right to earn our own way. I don't want to hurt you, but I've got to go."

Mrs. Bishop squared the superb shoulders that had made history in velvet evening gowns. "This sentimental appeal is very touching but too totally Quixotic to last. Do you expect me to believe that you formulated such a plan in five short weeks? That girl is in back of this nonsense. I forbid you to go."

The thrust of Chris's jaw was remarkably similar to his mother's. "There is little point in forbidding. I'm going."

"Bedloe!" Mrs. Bishop called sharply, as Chris whirled toward the door. "Stop him! If he takes that car, I'll have him arrested." Chris bolted across the space to where the big car was parked. The swift twilight had come and gone, and the sky stretching out over the Gulf was dark blue velvet. The glorious night meant to Chris only darkness for Nicky. Had she gone back the way they'd come? Or had she followed the more friendly road to Tampa? Would she drive all night? If she camped, he'd find her. He jerked open the door of the car as Bedloe's hand landed on his shoulder.

"Get out of there!" the detective commanded. "and them's orders!" "From whom?" Chris let go a short right to the nose still patched from the last encounter. Bedloe grunted, then Chris heard him say: "You asked for this."

Whether asked or not, Chris received a hard jolt to the jaw. There came darkness and crazy stars . . . When Bishop opened his eyes again, it was groggily and one at a time. He was dimly grateful that there was only two to be managed.

He seemed to be on a settee in the screen-enclosed porch of the lunch-room. There was a bulky figure in the background who might be Uncle Neddy but that seemed improbable. He closed his eyes and tried again. Before he had the lids operating, sounds emerged from the buzz in his head, and clarified into words.

There was the faint murmur of his mother, distressed; Nancy's unexpectedly shrill comments; a gruff grumble from Washington Bedloe; and finally, the unmistakable sonorous voice of Major Edward Carson Bishop—Uncle Neddy.

"I told you to stop him—not to kill him," Mrs. Bishop was protesting to the detective.

Yardley Thespians To Stage
"Burlesque" During Next Week

Nat Burns, managing director of the Yardley Theatre, Yardley, announces the stage and screen smash hit, "Burlesque," for production the week of August 11th, with Fred Kelly starring in the role of Skid, the dancing clown, who breaks the heart of his wife, Bonnie, played by the charming little musical comedy actress, Norma Lehn.

Fred Kelly, direct from the revue, "Two for the Show," in which he was co-featured with the Hartmans, Gina Malo, and Tommy Wonder, finds in Skid the perfect role to display his versatility. He alternates between tears and laughter throughout the show, from smooth dance routines to robust clowning in the guise of the putty-nosed, red-wigged clown who steals the show and wins back the love of his pretty little wife, Bonnie. Norma Lehn, who toured with Phil Baker in "Idiot's Delight," and has been seen in "You Can't Take It With You," and "Babes in Toyland," is signed for the new George Abbott show, "Young Man's Fancy," which opens on Broadway early in September. Miss Lehn is equally known on the stage and in musical shows, being a petite blonde who sings and dances as well as she acts.

Yardley Theatre audiences will enjoy seeing their favorites, Laurence Hayes, Jane Bennett, Wendell Corey, and Kathryn Cameron discard all dignity in drama, and appear as slapstick comedians in misfit clothes, tired burlesque troupers, and shrill voiced singers. Mary New, Irene Brodowski, Mona Langner, and Jane Evans don their dancing shoes and ruffled chorus girl costumes to add beauty to the big show.

scrupulous gang in an early-day cattle war, then swings to the side of the persecuted ranchers. The picture is a series of exciting highlights leading up to Billy's dramatic sacrifice of his own life to save that of the sweetheart of the girl he loves.

Taylor is brilliant in his hard-riding, fast-shooting portrayal of the title role, while Brian Donlevy is a dominant figure as the ranch foreman.

BRISTOL THEATRE

"The Gang's All Here" makes no pretenses about being a "million dollar production," nor does it boast a star-spangled "big name" cast, but it is nevertheless a fine photoplay that is well executed in every department—production, direction and acting.

Searing expose of a vicious new racket, "Under Age" scorchers across the Bristol Theatre screen with a melodramatic intensity which makes it one of the season's finest eye-openers in entertainment.

Tomorrow's features will be "West Point Widow" and "Emergency Landing."

RITZ THEATRE

Evidence that new Hollywood faces are always welcome is the pleasing appearance of Ingrid Bergman, co-starring with Robert Montgomery in "Rage in Heaven," which opened yesterday at the Ritz Theatre.

You are sure to see much of Miss Bergman in the immediate future, because she is not only a fine actress but an exciting and definitely "different" personality.

BERLY LEVERE TO APPEAR IN ARENA HERE AT ST. ANN'S

Nat'l A. A. U. Middleweight Champion to Meet Clem Kinsey

KNOCK-OUT BOUT SEEN

Orrino Scheduled To Put On The Gloves With Frank Lowry

The National A. A. U. middleweight champion, Berly Levere, colored, of Philadelphia, will appear in the amateur boxing show to be conducted in the St. Ann's A. A. arena, Wood and Franklin streets, Monday night.

Levere is scheduled to fight none other than Clem Kinsey, Diamond fighter, who hails from Yardley, Kinsey, former runner-up in the New Jersey tournament, is the hardest hitter to don the gloves in this section and will prove a sturdy opponent for the national champion. This bout is almost certain to end in a knock-out.

Match-maker Johnny Racecagno has also secured a bout for Carmen Orrino, Seibold boy. Orrino is scheduled to fight a former A. A. U. champion, Frank Lowry, of the Lamb's Club. Lowry appeared in a bout several weeks ago and beat Willie Crupud. Orrino also beat Crupud and so the boys are about on a par.

Bouts are also being secured for "Rip" Kelly, Al Turner, Bill McCollie and several other boys.

Reserve tickets may be purchased at the Diamond Sporting Goods Store, Mill street, of the St. Ann's A. A. clubhouse, Wood street.

EDGELY A. C. MOVES BACK INTO LEAGUE RACE

EDDINGTON, Aug. 9.—Socking Paul Dean and Harry Minster for ten safe blows, the Edgely A. C. moved back into the running for the second half flag of the Bristol Suburban League by triumphing over the Badenhausen nine, 9-2, last evening on Turner's field.

Besides, their ten safe blows, the Edgely took advantage of the miscues and slow fielding by the Badenhausen infielders, several balls going for hits that should have been stopped and the runners thrown out.

But regardless, the Badenhausen team would have had quite a job to triumph as Howard Black was doing the hurling for the Edgelyites. Howard gave up but three hits and two of these came in the last frame. He allowed a single in the first inning and then pitched runless and hitless ball until the sixth. An error by Johnny Dick gave the boiler-makers their pair of markers.

Joe Bleakney led the Edgely hitters with a home run and two singles in three official trips to the plate. Norman Tettemer had a busy night for the Cornwells team, making six nice catches in centerfield.

ROHM & HAAS WINS SIXTH STRAIGHT GAME

Scoring all its runs in the first two innings, the Rohm and Haas team won its sixth consecutive contest of the second half by trimming the Fleetwings nine, 6-3, last evening on the Maple Beach diamond.

The chemical workers need but one more win to cop the second half and if this is done, no playoffs will be necessary as the chemical workers also won the first half.

Karl Leinheiser and Herman Pluma were the hurlers and Pluma appeared the best as he held the airplane workers to four hits, two going to Leinheiser. The winner collected seven hits off the Fleetwings' pitcher but was blanked after the second inning.

"Wally" Oppman and "Sugar" Salustio played bang-up ball for their respective teams.

Many others were left parked in the road being used by the companies to turn their equipment and run hose lines. This made a bad condition much worse and valuable time was lost while firemen combatted thoughtless motorists.

tank and mountain units. The commanding generals of the sixth and twelfth field armies were captured.

Indicating the strategic Kiev-Odessa railroad had been captured, the communists announced two fully loaded supply trains were seized by the Germans.

Military authorities in Berlin jubilantly declared that the Germans followed up these successes with punches at both wings of the Soviet defense lines that rocked the Russians on their extreme flanks.

Speedy motorized units were said to be surrounding both Leningrad and Odessa preparatory to "choking them off by strangulation," while on the central front other swift Panzer detachments were declared to be steam-rolling over Russian resistance for a "ramrod drive against Moscow."

Military officials described the bunkers of the Stalin line as "smoking, shattered ruins" and said the Luftwaffe was incessantly blasting Red communications, giving the foe no chance to reorganize its defenses, which the land forces are "ripping into isolated units."

These Russian units, cut off and hemmed in on all sides, were declared to be incapable of fighting their way

By Pierre J. Huss
